

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation. In the United States of America, we should have a free media that is able to present a variety of views and opinions so that we, the people, can make informed decisions based on balanced reporting, rather than the political agenda of the broadcasting company's owners. Is the FCC a defender of our citizens' rights or part of the problem?
